

CHAPTER V

CLOSURE

A. Conclusion

Based on the results of the research, the writer can be conclude about Computer Assisted Language Learning. It is a tools commonly used helping teacher's for teaching and learning activity. In this study, English education department is one of the major in UIN Antasari Banjarmasin. Based on the results of the research, the writer found that the privilege and the quality of English Language Teacher in teaching listening this subject is good. But, still has some disadvantages to used the computer assisted language learning as a tool to provide practice focuses giving audio and video to help students to work on their handbook in daily activity, also middle and final test.

Beside that the results of the research also found that students in D class batch 2019 which were the subjects in this research, most students in this class stated that they were anthusias and active to use computer assisted language learning in their class. They also think the computer assisted language learning helps them in this subject. However, besides that there are also some students still has some disadvantages in using computer assisted language learning. Therefore, the quality of computer-assisted language learning used the students are good because help the student to work the task on their handbook only used to middle and final test. But, in daily activity computer assisted language learning used by teacher to teach them in listening class.

B. Suggestion

Based on the finding of the research, the writer would like to purpose the following suggestion:

1. By the development of technology rapidly is English teacher in this subject who uses the computer assisted language learning will better if using computer assisted language learning in the various features available in this class with computer completely, not just using on middle and final test. But it can also using every meeting.
2. This laboratory would be better if could support all student in this subject to be able to use the computer assisted language learning properly. So that the teachers and students in this subject can learn and teach according to the times at this time, so learning is more variation, interesting, and easier for teachers and students.