Keywords: Parenting Patterns, and Economic Limitations, Early Childhood

This study aims to determine the parenting patterns of parents who have economic limitations towards early childhood in Pulau Alalak Village Barito Regency South Kalimantan Selatan.

This type of research is a case study with a qualitative approach. This research uses a case study research approach with data collection tools in the form of observation, interviews, and dokumentation. This case study research aims to explain, direct events in the research location about the parenting style of parents who have economic limitations towards early childhood in the village of Pulau Alalak.

The results of the study concluded that the three families studied had different parenting styles, namely Authoritarian, Authoritatif (democratic), and Indeferent (permissive).

Based on the results of the data analysis obtained, it can be concluded that the parenting styles of parents who have early age children consist of three models, namely the Authoritarian, Authoritatif (democratic), and Indeferent (permissive). Obey the wishes of their parents because that is what their parents have tought and the experiences of their parents are Authoritarian, Authoritatif (democratic), so that children are independent and based on the experiences of their ancestors. Indeferent grandparents who have a disability are unable to walk because they are paralyzed, and based on the experiences of the macka ancestors.
