Teaching and learning English language is really related with linguistic intelligence since it is associated with the skills of speaking, writing, listening and reading. Moreover, linguistic intelligence can be developed by the help of the teachers by using some specific strategies. The participants of this study involved 40 teachers who taught pre-intermediate classes. The data were collected through questionnaire and interview, then analysed in three steps of data analysis: data reduction, data display, and drawing and verifying conclusion.

Furthermore, the aspects of linguistic intelligence developed by the teachers were the ability to use language to convince other individuals (rhetoric), the ability in using language to remember information (mnemonic), the ability to use language in providing the information (explanation), and the language potential to explain its own activities (metalinguistic).
