

CHAPTER V

CLOSURE

A. Conclusion

Based on what has been presented then there are some conclusions that we can take:

1. The attitude of inclusionism is an attitude that shows openness to other groups, recognizes the truth that exists in others and always tries to understand, understand and give. Several characteristics exist in inclusive attitudes in Islam, including: recognizing the truth of all religions (not multiplying that Islam is the only true religion), respecting freedom of belief or opinion, respecting each other, respecting the customs or customs of society, holding on to the Qur'an and Sunnah and open to opinions or criticisms of other religions.
2. When interpreting the verses of da'wah Sheikh Mulla Ali al-Qari prefers to be inclusive where with this inclusive attitude da'wah will be more acceptable because in it there is no element of blame towards others so as not to cause division. This is also triggered by the attitude of realizing that man is only commanded to always invite to goodness while the one who can give guidance is Only God alone. Mulla Ali Qari's inclusive interpretation can be grouped into several forms, namely: inclusive attitude towards Religion, inclusive attitude towards the weakness of others, inclusive attitude in communicating, and inclusive attitude in socializing.

A. Recommendation

Based on the research that has been done by the author, there are several recommendations that to be submitted, namely:

1. The author hopes that research on inclusivity interpretation of Sheikh Mulla Ali Qari to the verses of da'wah can be a reference and able to contribute to the treasures of Islamic science, especially in the field of science of the Qur'an and interpretation. Moreover, this paper is expected to provide motivation and encouragement to the community to remind each other in obedience in an inclusive way that is open to human beings without discriminating between each other or claiming bad for others. Because with this inclusive attitude, it will be easier for people to achieve peace and happiness without debate and contention.
2. This research is a simple study therefore this research is not the end of everything. Here the author only examines the inclusivity of the interpretation of Syekh Mulla Ali Qari which is devoted only to the verses of da'wah only, for the next researcher may be able to analyze of other verses that may be found on different sides in the interpretation. In addition, the author also hopes that readers can take the positive side that exists in this study, and can correct and filter if some errors and errors exist in this writing.
