

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSIONS AND SUGGESTIONS

A. Conclusion

Based on the results of research that have been discussed in the previous section about Student Perceptions on The Use of Google Translate in Learning English, the conclusion that can be drawn in this research is that Google Translate is an application that is intended to help students majoring in English in translating a text or sentences for which they do not know the meaning of the word, this application is also said by all the speakers as an easy and simple application, so that it is very useful for those who need assistance in translating a text or sentence in English to Indonesian.

The difficulties experienced by each student are different, there are those who do feel that they do not have a lot of vocabulary and some have difficulty because they have to interpret words that have the same diction as other words but have different meanings. The existence of Google Translate is the answer to solving the difficulties that these students of the English department are experiencing. By offering the convenience and practicality of using Google Translate, that's why these students chose to use Google Translate as an alternative if they had difficulty translating a text or sentence.

B. Suggestions

Based on the existing conclusions, when it is suggested that in using the Google Translate application, students majoring in English should use it only if it is necessary or when they are able to interpret a text or sentence. Due to the convenience and practicality offered by Google Translate, researchers are quite concerned about the desire of English students to try to memorize or enrich their vocabulary by continuing to practice and learn. Not merely being Google Translate as the only way to translate words or sentences before he tried to his ability first.