

CHAPTER V

CLOSURE

A. Conclusion

The phonemic awareness in Indonesian EFL learners is one of the correlated to their reading comprehension. The learner interpretation to their awareness of phonemic awareness in the fifth semester of English Department UIN Antasari Banjarmasin. The conclusion divided into two based on the research question is as follows:

1. Based on findings, students' phonemic awareness in the fifth semester has an average value by measurement result is 84. The detail of the classification represent that students' performance is proficient at 80%, developing at 13%, and beginning at 7%. In other word, student concern about phonemic awareness in the fifth semester in English Department with average status is proficient.
2. The result of students' correlation between phonemic awareness and reading comprehension in the fifth semester refers to the Correlation Coefficient Table to find the value of the criteria. Based on the findings, the result is 0.519 using SPSS version 16, and the interval from the results is 0.41-0.70. The correlation results based on the Coefficient Table show that phonemic awareness and reading comprehension have a high correlation.

B. Suggestion

1. For the learners, the results from this study, expected that students consider their ability to level up their phonemic awareness by comprehending word or text carefully.
2. For the lecturer, the results from this study, the lecturer expected to emphasize learner phonemic awareness to comprehend successfully.
3. For the next researcher, the results from this study can be used for related references and to be able to find out the influence of phonemic awareness on reading comprehension.