"Write an essay titled 'When I Grow Up, I Want to Be a ___' to understand the kind of job you want to do..."

After reading his son's homework assignment for summer vacation, Ulysses asks, "What do you want to be when you grow up, Frankie?"

Seven-year-old Frank's eyes sparkle. "I want to be a Deepspace Hunter!" He jumps up and down. "I'm gonna defeat Wanderers like this! Swish, swish swish, swish! They're so awesome!"

Ulysses looks a little surprised. "Really?"

"Really!"

Smiling, Ulysses pulls his son onto his lap. "I have a friend who's a Deepspace Hunter. In fact, he's the best of the best. Do you want to go to his place and have him teach you how to become one?"

The best of the best? What kind of hunter is he? The hunters in the cartoons are already really cool. They wear shiny outfits with super cool weapons. They travel to every corner of the city, flying across the sky and can run on walls. A single move is enough to amaze the whole world! If there's a hunter better than them, doesn't that mean he'd be cooler?

Following Dad to his old friend's house, Frank watches as the door opens. He's filled with longing and anticipation. Then, he's stunned.

The man inside is wearing a pair of white slippers and regular pajama pants. There was no shiny, golden outfit. He didn't transform. He wore normal clothes, and he has a lopsided sleeping mask with stars on it. He still looks a little tired after yawning.

This person... is a Deepspace Hunter? He talks to Dad, but Frank doesn't pay attention. He could see the question mark on the man's face. It changed into an exclamation mark and then ellipses. After that, he kneels down to look Frank in the eye.

"Hello, my name is Xavier."

His voice... It doesn't seem like he would shout a catchphrase.

Frank's heart beats frantically in his chest. He grabs the hem of his father's shirt and says, "I'm Frank..."

He looks at Xavier's hair. "Grandpa?" But looking at Xavier's face, he's unsure. "Uncle?"

Xavier lowers his head, scratching his neck. "...Xavier is good enough."
