

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTIONS

This chapter presents the conclusion and suggestions of this study about EFL Students' Perceptions on implementation of online learning during covid-19 pandemic at English Department of Islamic State of Rasyidiyaha Khalidiyah Amuntai.

A. Conclusion

This research aimed to identify the EFL students' perceptions on Implementation of online learning during Covid-19 pandemic at English Department of Islamic State of Rasyidiyah Khalidiyah Amuntai. From the result of this research, it can be conclude that EFL Students generally gave their positive perceptions. Students mostly agree toward the effectiveness of online learning, online learning system conducted during the Covid-19 pandemic is effective. Effectively implemented due to the conditions that require to do distance learning. Online learning also inefficient since cost incurred more when it was compared with offline learning. Cost incurred mainly to buy internet quota or provider with stable signal, to keep up with online lecturer.

Online learning also is a flexibility source of teaching and learning, as most of students agreed upon the fact that students can easily access learning materials anytime, anywhere. Online learning encourage student-centered learning since many assignments given by the lecturer and they have to manageable during the pandemic situation. Another point, the most familiar application to use during learning online is WhatsApp, because it is commonly used, easy to be access, and felt to be cheaper than other application.

B. Suggestion

Base on the research findings, there are a number of suggestions as follows. The first goes to the English lecturer, the second goes to the English students, and the last goes to the future researcher, who interested in doing research toward online learning:

1. Suggestion for English lecturer

Lecturer are expected to be able to apply effective learning technique for online, more varied in the use of media used, to be more have communicate with students. As well as to motivate students in the learning online process.

2. Suggestion for English students

For students, they are expected to be more enthusiastic and disciplined in participating online learning.

3. Suggestion for future research

The result of this research is expected to be a reference for other researchers related to online learning