Reviewer- A*Decision: Major revisions required

The study focuses on analyzing the fatwas (religious rulings) issued by the Majelis Ulama Indonesia (MUI) during the COVID-19 pandemic in Indonesia. The study aims to examine the legal maxims applied in these fatwas and their role in developing Islamic law, particularly in the context of contemporary problems like the pandemic. I have some serious concerns that authors should address before proceeding to a further stage.

1. The abstract should provide a clear overview of the study's objectives and research focus. It must highlight the importance of understanding the legal principles used in MUI fatwas during the pandemic and their relationship with Indonesian laws concerning disaster management and COVID-19 prevention.
2. The introduction would benefit from a more concise and streamlined presentation. Some sentences could be rephrased or condensed to improve readability and clarity.
3. The literature review part should discuss various aspects related to disaster management policy in Indonesia, the concept of Fiqh of disaster, the role of legal maxims (Qawâ`id fihiyyah), the role of religious institutions and fatwas, and the application of Indonesian criminal law and Fiqh.

4. The literature review follows a structured approach, introducing each topic separately. The inclusion of headings for each section makes it easy to navigate through the review. However, there could be improvements in the overall flow and coherence of the information. Some paragraphs appear disjointed and could benefit from better integration and transition between ideas.
5. While the authors mention the importance of the MUI fatwas in guiding Indonesian Muslims during the pandemic, it would be valuable to include some specific findings or insights from the study. What were the key legal maxims identified? How did they contribute to the development of Islamic law in response to the pandemic? Including a brief summary of the main findings would provide a glimpse into the significance and relevance of the research.

Reviewer -B

Decision: Major revisions required

The article "Implementing the Fiqh of Disaster in Islamic Criminal Law Perspective and Legal Relevance of Mui's Fatwas during the COVID-19 Pandemic" deals with an interesting and thought-provoking domain and is well written. But it would benefit from further refinement to enhance clarity, include methodological details, highlight key findings, and conclude with the research's implications. Here are specific comments.

- The literature review covers a broad range of topics related to disaster management policy, Fiqh of disaster, legal maxims, religious institutions and fatwas, and Indonesian criminal law. However, the content should provide an overview of each topic and introduces relevant studies. Also, the review lacks depth and analysis in certain areas, offering only a surface-level understanding of the topics. A more critical analysis of the literature and its implications would enhance the review's quality.
- The literature review must incorporate a variety of sources, including academic papers and studies. The inclusion of citations enhances the credibility and reliability of the information presented.
- There is a need for critical evaluation and analysis of the studies for the concepts discussed. It would be beneficial to critically assess the strengths and weaknesses of the literature, identify gaps in the existing research, and provide a more nuanced perspective on the topics covered. Including the author's own insights and opinions would add value to the review.
- The study should state how data was collected? What was the main focus of the data analysis? Explain in detail the istinbâth al hukm in the fatwas of the MUI.
- The results must list all fatwas issued by the MUI during the pandemic and categorize them into categories. It should also mention the application of legal maxims derived from maqâshid shari'ah in these fatwas.
