This thesis is a research study whose focus is the behavior of the Bugis Pagatan community in South Kalimantan who always do Nasellei Asenna (Change Names) during the Ijab Qabul in the customs of the Bugis Pagatan community in South Kalimantan

This thesis aims to analyze the name change that occurs at the time of consent and consent in the wedding customs of the Bugis Pagatan community, South Kalimantan. The Bugis Pagatan wedding custom is a tradition rich in symbolism and ritualism that plays an important role in the life of the local community. This study uses a qualitative approach involving data collection through participatory observation, in-depth interviews, and documentation studies. The research informants consisted of people who were directly involved in the Bugis Pagatan wedding ceremony, such as traditional leaders, the bride and groom, and the families involved.

Data analysis was carried out using the Descriptive Analytical method, which is an effort to collect data and information that already exists and actually happened in the field and then described and presented again in language that is easier to digest and associated with scientific theories to describe Nasellei Asenna's habit of changing her name at Ijab. qabul in a traditional Bugis Pagatan wedding, South Kalimantan

The results of the study show that this change of name is a very strong tradition and can even become a customary law because there is a sanction in the form of a feeling of worry that something will happen if this change is not made. Although substantively this name change does not affect the marriage law, if this name change is recorded in the marriage certificate excerpt it will affect administratively.
