1. Yes, I have
2. I find that reading journals is really kind of difficult, on the other hand, I also get used to reading a lot of journals but at least I got confused for searching and reading in google scholar that I looking for
3. Well, before I take the EAP Course I read a lot of journals because in another course we have to read a lot of journals also. But in EAP course I was required to read a lot of journals because in that course we have to write a journal also (make a journal).
4. I'm not sure about that, but I think it was 10 times in a month or in a week maybe I read a journal. And I read a journal for the assignment.
5. I usually, maybe just use skimming, the first thing that I have to do is find the keyword that I looking for so then I can read quickly.
6. A little bit, but if I read a lot of journal it makes confussing but if just one journal its find. When I read the journal they haven't subtitle and like research question or research method. Sometimes in journal they don't have that in order to know it is just the right journal that I have been looking for I have read the findings and the results. Sometimes in reading I got a lot of words that I've not understand like scientific terms.
7. Yes, I have difficulties in understanding the technical terms in journal. I think I do have a limited vocabulary in reading journals.

8. Sometimes yes and sometimes no. there is journal that really, you know like to the point there also subjournal you need to read couple time to understand what they have written in that journal. So I think its fifty-fifty.

9. Not really, I usually have conclude the journal if I really understand what there in findings and results, in reading journal I read a couple time in findings and results. So then I can conclude this journal.

10. Not I don't have difficulties in speed reading.

11. Yes, a little bit yes.

12. Yes I ever read whole the journal if the journal use a lot of scientific word.
From the abstract to conclusion. And I read slowly

13. Yes, I have experiences that a lot because sometimes I serach the title of the journal like I read the journal but not at all (don't get it).
