

CHAPTER V

CLOSURE

The conclusion and suggestions for the participants and other researchers for potential further study in this field are presented in this chapter. The research begins by concluding the discussion from the previous chapter. Furthermore, the researcher takes into account the findings, discussions, and conclusions to formulation.

A. Conclusion

1. The researchers found that there are listening principle applied by lecturers of listening course at UIN Antasari Banjarmasin. The principles were include focus on listening to integrated skills course, use technique that are intrinsically motivating and encourage the development listening skill.
2. Based on the results of the interview, the researchers found three types of listening activities implemented by the lecturers. There were storytelling, gap fill and answer the question in toefl
3. The researcher found that in the learning process the lecturers more often used authentic materials such as authentic listening viewing materials and authentic printed materials.

B. Suggestion

1. Lecturers of listening courses should use other types of activities in the learning process. And determine interesting and varied activities to attract student motivation in learning listening.
2. Future researchers can explore more about listening principles, activities and materials in teaching listening. And can conduct specific research in other fields.