

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESSTIONS

A. Conclusion

Based on the analysis result on the instructions in the English textbook “Bahasa Inggris” for twelfth grade students of senior high school is using checklist evaluation which is adapted from Tomlinson and Richard, the researcher concluded that the instruction in the English Textbook for twelfth grade students published by Ministry of Education and Culture have been fulfilled the criteria of good instructions in terms of being evaluated, such as, the textbook instructions encourage learners to build critical thinking, followed by examples, and permit a silent period at the beginning of the lesson.

The indicators with good quality of instructions category for the textbook instruction is building critical thinking because it is more a half of all of instructions of C1 to C6 levels which are the slightly higher beyond their current proficiency level are ready that mentioned by Tomlinson (2003) theory.

The indicators with weak quality of instructions category for the textbook instructions is followed by examples because the instructions without followed by examples are more than with followed by examples. Meanwhile, the quality of the instruction in permitting a silent period was good because all of chapters began with permitting silent period instructions at the beginning of the lesson. This result shows that this textbook can be used as a teaching material used for teaching and learning process, although the textbook instructions followed by examples are less.
