Abstract: This article attempts to understand the inclusion of citizens and other actors, the structure of incentives and accountability and service delivery outcomes in relation to participatory forms of urban governance in Indian cities. Under a decentralized set-up, the political nature and the poor attendance of people in participative forums seriously serve to undermine the constitutionally envisaged aim of 'deepening democracy'. New forms of participatory arrangements have been dominated by the middle classes and/or powerful local leaders, resulting in the disempowerment of poorer members of the communities concerned. Patronage politics were engraved in these new forms, where the targeted delivery of services yielded high dividends for the patrons. All these factors necessitate the effective engagement of the excluded and disadvantageous section of people with the policies, politics and processes of participatory governance in Indian cities.

In addition, many cities see CLTs as a way to provide perpetually affordable units, a benefit not provided by inclusionary zoning ordinances that often require affordability only for a term of years.

This article explores how some cities have already added CLTs to their list of affordable housing policy tools, ultimately arguing that the current-economic environment presents a strong case for more cities to start CLTs at this time. Keeping abreast of the CLT trend is especially important for land use and zoning lawyers because, should the massive city-wide CLTs planned for several major cities in the United States prove successful in coming years, the CLT model may well be adopted by other local governments, alter how project proponents meet inclusionary housing requirements, and revolutionize how affordable housing dollars are spent by local governments. PERSYARATAN

The best way to inquire about HBR's potential interest in a topic is to prepare a proposal. It can be submitted by mail or electronically and should answer the following questions:

1. What is the central message of the article you propose to write (the 'aha')? What is important, useful, new, or counter-intuitive about your idea? Why do managers need to know about it?
2. How can your idea be applied in business today (the 'so what')?
3. For which kinds of companies would the idea NOT work well? For which kinds of companies would it work especially well? Why?
4. What research have you conducted to support the argument in your article?
5. On what previous work (either of your own or of others) does this idea build?
6. What is the source of your authority? What academic, professional, or personal experience will you draw on?

It need not be long and it certainly need not be written in question-and-answer format. The important point is to cover the topics the questions raise.

Then please write a two-to-three page (500-750 word) narrative outline laying out the structure of your article and describing each important point in a separate paragraph. Give us a sense not just of the ground you will cover but of how the logic will flow. Please illustrate your points with real-world examples or provide one extended, detailed example.

PERSYARATAN

Some of the questions we will ask ourselves when evaluating your proposals are:

1. Is this idea new? If not, does it offer a new and useful perspective on an existing idea?
2. What is it based on? What are its antecedents?
3. Did it persuade me?
4. Did I find it interesting? Would HBR readers find it interesting?
5. Does it address an issue that matters to managers?
6. Could it be put into practice?
7. Is the author trying to sell the reader something? To use the insights in the article, would the reader need to consult the author?
8. Are there good illustrations? Have I seen the same company examples used to illustrate a multitude of other models, theses, or points of view?
9. Where are the holes in the thinking?

Each issue of HBR contains both feature articles and departments:

Each feature is an in-depth, rigorous presentation of a significant advance in management thinking and its application in the real world of business. These articles help business leaders establish an intellectual agenda for discussion - and change - within their companies.

Each issue also has a spotlight section which includes feature articles on a particular topic.

ACCEPTANCE LETTER FROM EBSCO

from Paige Larkin <plarkin@ebscohost.com> subject RE: BULLETIN OF CHEMICAL REACTION ENGINEERING AND CATALYSIS (ISSN 1978-2993)
to istadi@undip.ac.id

Dear Dr. Istadi,

BCREC has been specifically selected for inclusion in our flagship academic database, Academic Search Complete (ASC). ASC is the successor to Academic Search Premier. For more information on ASC, including a complete list of titles currently licensed and available in it, please copy and paste this URL into your browser: http://www.ebscohost.com/thisTopic.php?marketID=1&topicID=633 . Since your library does not currently subscribe to ASC, I have requested that trial access to the database be arranged for you. The access instructions should arrive from Jill Garfield within the next few business days.

I hope this helps.

Best,
Paige

Bulletin of Chemical Reaction Engineering & Catalysis, 10 (2), 2015, iv

PREFACE

Bulletin of Chemical Reaction Engineering & Catalysis (ISSN 1978-2993) is an international journal published by Department of Chemical Engineering, Diponegoro University, jointly with Masyarakat Katalis Indonesia - Indonesian Catalyst Society (MKICS). In Scopus coverage years 2011-2014, this journal reached the highest impact factor (by journalmetrics.com) in Indonesia and world ranked 39th or Q4 level in Scimago Catalysis category and world ranked 24th or Q3 level in Scimago Process and Chemistry Technology category. In addition, this journal has also good impact factor in Scimago Journal Ranking and Journal Metrics with SJR = 0.251; SNIP = 0.848; and IPP = 0.719 for coverage years 2011-2014. Thank you for great contribution to all respectful Authors, Peer-reviewers, and Editors.

This journal is dedicated as a media for communicating all research activities in chemical reaction engineering and catalysis fields, and disseminating the novel technology and news related to chemical reaction engineering, catalyst engineering and fundamentals, bioreactor engineering, membrane reactor, and catalytic reactor engineering.

This issue (BCREC, Volume 10, Issue 2, Year 2015) has published 12 articles with various topics in catalysis materials, kinetics studies, and chemical reactor modeling and optimization. This issue was authored and co-authored by 49 authors from 6 countries (Indonesia, India, Iran, Taiwan, Malaysia, and Egypt).

In the first article, a research article about the vulcanization kinetics of ethylene-propylene diene monomer (EPDM) rubber thermal insulation was studied by Fathurrohman et al. [1] using rheometer under isothermal condition at different temperatures. This study suggested that the optimum curing time was predicted from autocatalytic model and the kinetic parameters were obtained by using the
